

I think it is a tragedy that so much time and energy, not to mention monetary resources, is being spent over a minor infraction of the FCC's regulations with the Janet Jackson situation. It is also completely inappropriate to extend the punishment to other areas of the media (radio) who were not even involved in the incident. One of our basic rights in America is freedom of speech; although I believe the initial intentions of the FCC were decent, the power of your organization is in desperate need of check.
